

UNION SERVICE AT CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. J. B. Stinson, D. D., Delivered
Sermon on Jesus' Appeal to the Mind.

At the union service in the Central Baptist church on Tuesday evening Rev. Joel B. Stinson, D.D., the pastor, gave a very instructive sermon on Jesus' Appeal to the Mind. After the opening hymn the invocation was given by Rev. Joseph F. Obb, pastor of the Universalist church, and the responsive reading was led by Rev. Frederick W. Coleman, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church. The scripture lesson was read by Rev. Herbert J. Wyckoff, pastor of the Second Congregational church, and Rev. Edward S. Worcester, pastor of Broadway Congregational church of-fered prayer.

The text of the sermon was Mark 12:34—And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy mind. Jesus was prominently a teacher, and His instruction on Tuesday of Passion Week was simple and typical, said Rev. Dr. Stinson. I shall not confine myself, however, to the consideration of the scriptural material recorded under this day, but rather undertake to view the theme from the standpoint of a broader outlook.

Ever since the wise men brought their offerings to the infant Jesus, the world has been bringing its most precious treasures to Him, and He has been leading them to His feet. And with good reason, for He, as no one else, has set the world to thinking. Someone has ventured this supposition: On a certain night, as by some mysterious alchemy, every direct and indirect reference to Jesus should fade from the pages of all the books of the world. Then, perhaps, we would begin to comprehend how large is the place that Jesus has occupied in the world's intellectual life through all these centuries. Sir David Dalrymple estimated that if all the copies of the New Testament had been destroyed before the end of the third century, that their writings could be re-produced from the quotations found in other books written during those three centuries. It is said that he took up the task and that in two months he had found and indexed nearly every verse of the New Testament. He was satisfied that a continued search would locate the rest.

Nicodemus spoke more truly than he knew when he said to Jesus, on the night of that notable interview: "Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher coming from God." And Paul, writing to the Romans, declared that an essential characteristic of the religion of Jesus is its appeal to the reason. "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, to present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your rational service."

By the prodigies of John's gospel, Jesus is called the Word. A word is a symbol of an idea. Jesus is God's most perfect thought to the world—the expression of God's love and the revelation of His purpose. "The Word became flesh and dwelt among us, full of grace and truth."

As the creature, Jesus would have been known, Jesus made His name known to the world because of His miracles. The other teachers for centuries had followed certain beaten paths, but Jesus made a new trail. He revealed a new character of God as a Father who loves His children. He demonstrated the dignity and worth of the individual soul. His teaching formed a new standard of conduct and conduct. He set in new light the value of self-sacrifice. His pure teaching was the first satisfactory definition of the term "religion." And there are only a few examples of His teaching.

In Jesus' appeal of Jesus to the mind was due to the subtlety of His teaching, and the logic of His reasoning. He was not a scholar, for he had no formal education, but in His teaching He made an impression upon the minds of men that has never been surpassed. He was not a philosopher, for he did not touch and he touched nothing that he did not understand. He was not a logician, for he did not touch and he touched nothing that he did not understand. He was not a logician, for he did not touch and he touched nothing that he did not understand.

The Reid & Hughes Co

Men listened to Cicero and said: "What exquisite action!" But when they listened to Demosthenes they said: "Let us go and fight Philip!" Jesus had that kind of power—the power to make men act.

The issue of it all is to accept Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord. His appeal is primarily to the mind, but the mind unlocks the door of the will and the will beckons us onward to service. It is said that when Plato came to Socrates to buy wisdom, that Socrates had a dream. He thought there was a man and took refuge in the ruins of his temple a milk-white dove. He kept it there and saw it grow until one day when its pinions were developed it flew away and was lost among the clouds. And when Socrates told the story he said that dove was Plato, who had stayed with him only long enough to grow his wings and then had taken his lofty flight. Jesus takes us to His great heart and He keeps us there and watches our growing minds and spirits and nurtures us within His care. "Blessed are they who take refuge under the shadow of His wings."

Rev. E. W. Coleman pronounced the benediction.

CITY UNION CHOOSES OFFICERS FOR YEAR.

Mrs. Calvin L. Swan Elected Leader and Mrs. A. Nelson Vice Leader.

In the absence of the leader, Mrs. C. L. Swan, the vice leader, Mrs. A. Nelson, presided at the annual meeting of the City union of the King's Daughters, which was held in the First Congregational chapel Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. A good number was present. The devotional service was led by Rev. E. H. Evans. Reference was made to Holy week, and a part of I Co. 1 was read and commented upon. Familiar hymns were sung. There was also special music. Miss Ruth L. Potter rendered in good voice the solo Teach Me to Pray and in May Time, Mrs. E. E. Richard accompanying.

The business meeting was opened by the report of the meeting of the City union held last fall in Greenville, when the state King's Daughters' meeting was reported. This was given by Mrs. M. E. Nelson, secretary pro tem. Responses to the roll call of societies was by scripture mottoes. From Charitable Circle 3 members present. Clara Comfort, E. Euphemian 2, Ever Ready
